Description

The American Tobacco Historic District (ATHD), in Durham, N.C., represents the ongoing revitalization of the city's most prominent downtown industrial complex. The completed Phase I of the site, which was developed by Capitol Broadcasting Company, is a contemporary 500,000 square foot, mixed-use office and retail complex situated across from the Durham Bull Athletic Park. Phase II, now underway, will add 38,000 square feet of office and retail space, 53 rental apartments and 17 for-sale condominiums as part of a larger 300,000 square foot addition of adaptive reuse to the property. Several construction related jobs will be created for the project, and at least 75 new permanent office jobs will be located in the city, once the project is fully leased.

Investment Type

Rev. 08.27.2018 - 11:54 am

Enterprise's investment provides a senior subordinate loan, a junior subordinated loan and a convertible junior subordinated loan to the project, utilizing New Markets Tax Credits. The ATHD investment is an excellent example of Enterprise's ability to structure and close a highly complex financial transaction with an unrelated New Markets Tax Credit lender and equity investor, as well as a senior loan to finance the for-sale condos. This project signifies an Enterprise first: use of New Markets Tax Credits in North Carolina.

Market

Durham, N.C. built its reputation and economy on the production of tobacco products. However, in recent decades, the Raleigh-Durham MSA has become known as the "Research Triangle" due to the commercial spin-off of biotech companies and high tech research from two nearby universities-Duke and The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Durham's economy continues to be driven by a strong manufacturing base, with an increasing base of professional service jobs. The area around ATHD is an impoverished area with a low median income. The completion of Phase II of ATHD is instrumental to the success of the overall project and will bring much needed residential space and additional office workers to downtown Durham. This will ultimately result in a critical source of economic activity for local businesses. The city of Durham has been supportive of this project, and is working on a comprehensive improvement plan to revitalize the downtown district, including new roads and parks.

Community Impact

Approximately 60 full-time and part-time jobs for workers will be created as a result of the project construction. Struever Bros. Eccles and Rouse (SBER) has committed to partnering with a transitional training program for the project, to train and employ 15-20 ex-offenders. Further, SBER has agreed to employ approximately 20 low-income residents from the local St. Teresa neighborhood as full-time workers. Finally, in addition to employing local labor for daily, part-time jobs, SBER requires all subcontractors working on its projects to commit to hiring workers from the local community and the city of Durham. In terms of permanent job creation, approximately 75-100 new permanent office jobs will be added as a result of the new commercial space. An additional 425 office workers will be relocated from the local area to this project; thus the project will house 500+ office workers.
